Spring 2025

Interdisciplinary Research & Teaching Groups

Hosted by: Dr. Anne Duran, Psychology Department

All are welcome!!

Dates: Every Tuesday (Beginning January 21, 2025)

Time: 12 pm

Location: Faculty Teaching & Learning Center, Library 102

The goal of the Interdisciplinary Research Group (IRG) is to support each other's efforts in working on our research. We get together weekly to set attainable goals, check on each other's progress, encourage each other, and share our work with others. Whether your research is just in the 'talking' phase or if you're submitting a publication soon, the IRG is a great place to interact with others who are working on research.

The goal of the Interdisciplinary Teaching Group (ITG) is to establish an informal 'Learning Community'-in this case, a group of people who are motivated to learn about teaching. We can talk about problems we're having in the classroom, successes we've experienced, different ways to approach assignments, anything we want. All levels of teaching experience are welcome, and people from across the campus are welcome too; whether we share the same discipline or not, or have the same levels of experience or not, we can benefit from one another's points of view.
