The Emergency Medicine Research Associate Program (EMRAP) at Kern Medical is a clinical and epidemiological research program operated in conjunction with the Department of Emergency Medicine and Residency Program.

EMRAP provides students with the unique opportunity to contribute to research projects in emergency medical services through first-hand experience with patient interaction and close mentorship by emergency medicine residency and faculty members.

Research Associates (RA) have the ability to interact with patients and observe/shadow medical students, residents, and faculty physicians.

Program benefits:

- Experience in clinical research and quality improvement initiatives
- One-on-one patient interaction
- Understanding of emergency department systems and operations
- Working with emergency medicine faculty, residents, and auxiliary staff
- Learning medical terminology and laboratory tests
- Learning pathology of diseases
- Potential letters of recommendation from faculty
- Flexible shift availability for school and other obligations
